SYMPOSIUM SUMMARY

On the occasion of the 125th anniversary of the birth of Milutin Milankovitch, Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts is organizing an international symposium aimed at reviewing the state-of-the-art of climate science as it relates to the work of Milankovitch. The emphasis of the symposium will be paleoclimate, but present understanding of the Earth's climate dynamics, and a summary of the numerical tools used nowadays will be briefly covered. Review lectures will be presented on paleoclimate record – deep sea cores, continents, ice cores, on long-term climate data analysis, modeling, and astronomical forcing. Milankovitch's life and work, the colorful memories he has left of the events of his time, and his opus as a poetic science writer, will also be highlighted. The symposium will consist of invited lectures, but will include poster sessions to accommodate contributed papers.

4. Belgrade, and getting to Belgrade:

Belgrade is well known for its cultural, historical and tourist traditions dating back more than a century, for its pleasant climate and for its hospitality. Belgrade hotels offered guarantee pleasant accommodation, rich gastronomic fare, and are close to excellent entertainment and shopping. The city has a friendly, lively academic atmosphere, due to the presence of the Belgrade University and its students. The organizers hope participants will enjoy their stay in Belgrade, with its beautiful setting on two major rivers and numerous other attractions.

Belgrade is connected with most European towns by a variety of means of transport. The participants arriving at the Belgrade International Airport are recommended to take the airport bus to the Bus Air Terminal (Hotel Slavija) and a taxi thereafter.

Participants taking taxis from the airport to their hotels are advised to be aware of the distance involved, and that the taxi rates in Belgrade are less than the typical rates in western European countries. Asking for approximate fare before hiring a taxi is recommended.

5. Accommodation:

Hotels of all categories should be available for the participants of the symposium. A number of hotel rooms in different price categories have been booked in Belgrade at special rates. Hotel accommodation will be reserved when ZEPTER PASSPORT has received the accompanied registration form together with the hotel deposit. ZEPTER PASSPORT will tentatively book another hotel if the desired accommodation should be fully booked. The deposit will be deducted from the hotel bill when paying the hotel bill in Belgrade. The participants will pay the remaining balance directly to the hotel in Dinars. Hotel reservations should be made on the registration form.
